

Recall of peaches supplied or packed by Prima Wawona or Wawona Packing Company due to potential link to Salmonella Enteritidis outbreak in the USA

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has issued a food recall alert on peaches packed or supplied by Prima Wawona or Wawona Packing Company in the United States of America (USA). These peaches are potentially linked to an ongoing multistate outbreak of Salmonella Enteritidis in the USA.

2 As the implicated product was imported into Singapore, the Singapore Food Agency has directed the importer, Satoyu Trading Pte Ltd, to recall the product. The recall is ongoing.

3 The consumption of food contaminated with Salmonella can cause salmonellosis in humans, which may lead to symptoms such as diarrhoea, fever, vomiting and abdominal cramps. Salmonellosis can be fatal to young children, the elderly and those with impaired immune systems.

4 Consumers who have purchased the implicated product should not consume it, and those who have consumed the implicated product and have concerns about their health should seek medical advice. Consumers may contact the importer at 9066 1290 for enquiries and for exchange or refund of products.

5 Details of the product are as follows:

Implicated Product:

All peaches packed or supplied by Prima Wawona or Wawona Packing Company

The peaches may have the following stickers with Price Look Up (PLU) numbers on them: 4037, 4038, 4044, 4401, 94037, 94038, 94044, 94401. However, not all peaches with these PLU codes are supplied by Prima Wawona. Consumers who are unsure about the brand or variety of their loose peaches should contact the respective retailers.

Source country: USA

Issued by the Singapore Food Agency

25 August 2020